DEMONSTRATE!

More and more say "no more _____!"

por Crema laBlanca

Growing concern about _____ (insert political issue here) spurred students into action yesterday.

More than 17 _____ (insert adjective here) students braved mild temperatures and moderate winds with some possibility of showers in the early afternoon to demonstrate outside the _____ building. They demanded an immediate stop to _____ (political issue).

"The _____ (insert monolithic institution here) should stop their horrible, horrible practices," said one grim but determined demonstrator. "They should relinquish their powers to the masses."

"We'll continue demonstrating until we bring the imperialist _____ (scum/ dogs/ cats/ elephants/ rhizomes) to their knees," another demonstrator howled.

The demonstrators tramped around and around in a small circle, chanting _____ ("hey ho, we won't go"/ "hey you, SQ, go sit in your own poo!"/ "So so so! So so what!").

"We're here to tell _____ (see (1), above) that we're fed up," said one feisty demonstrator.

"I'm so fed up!"

Roddick Gate trick or treat pub nite turns sour.

Later, they death-defyingly flung themselves at a moving police vehicle heading backwards at a high velocity.

"Tell the world I did it for _____ (insert issue here)," said a demonstrator tossing herself under the vehicle's wheels.

"It warms my heart to see so many people out," said another demonstrator.

"I feel good about the rally, but I don't think it will work," another demonstrator said.

But the protestor was worried by the "low turn-out" from McGill—only "the same old 17 students".

"It's sad McGill is so apathetic." At least one student still had high spirits. "I know exactly what to do when the kops try to arrest us. I attended a civil disobedience workshop this weekend."

Several other protestors recounted the "extraordinary learning experience" of the workshop, where they learned how to safely resist the state.

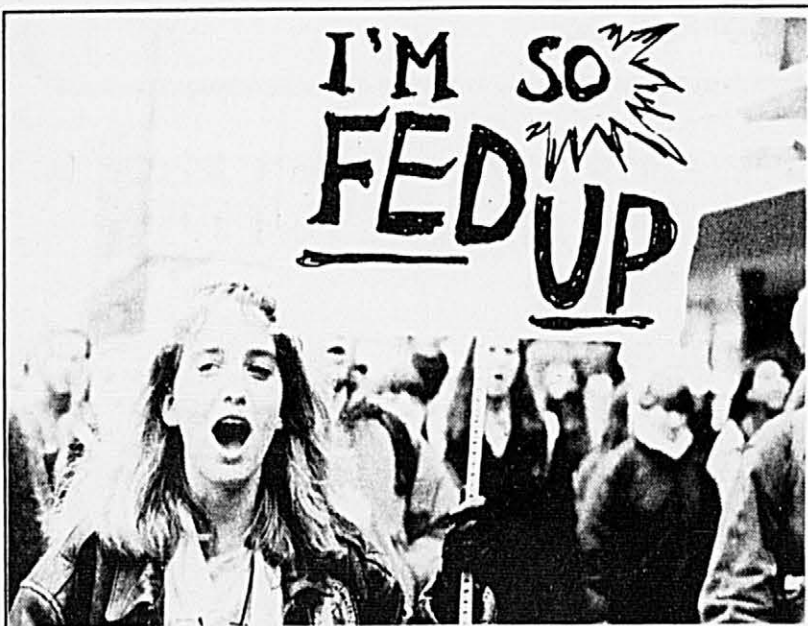

"It's all so neat. If you wanna get arrested, you've really got to tie your hair back and wear loose clothing," said one glowing teenager.

The throng then proceeded to pour synthetic blood on the flag of _____ (insert imperialist nation).

A Daily editor attending the demo who asked not to be quoted said: "Sure is _____ (cold/ hot) out here."

The eager students plan to rush out into the streets and continue the struggle again next weekend at a _____ (sit/ love/ die/ bleed/ speak/ dig/ toke) -in.

A university-wide _____ -in will be held today, to attack the _____ issue. Let's make the pigs (and other animals) finally hear us. Bring your lunch.

Doesn't she look "fed up"?

Second coming occurs during demo.

I was in a fix: nerd columnist pontificates

Blazes!

I get down to the Gazette office to write this column and I realize I've forgotten my security pass. Bleeding Jehosaphat. I practically freak my beans right then and there. Jiminey Cricket!

I was locked out.

For your information, Montreal's other English daily has an air-sealed electronic security system that keeps out all the vagrants, malcontents, freaks, weirdos, intellectuals, social workers, mothers, taxi drivers, factory workers, french people, and readers from getting inside the building and wreaking havoc.

You gotta have a card in this world. A big newspaper can't just go around having an open door where anybody can just walk in and express an opinion. But this time, it was keeping out me. Me, Page Two Man. Me, the person I agree with most.

So there I was, no pass and on top of everything, it was raining. A dark, wet, Montreal rain. The kind of rain that makes trees wet. The kind of rain that goes down the drain and then you don't see it anymore. That kind of rain.

I was in a fix.

I had to get myself into the Gazette and do my job or this column would never get written and I would never find out how it ends.

Just then, I see some Gazette editorial writers coming up the escalator, all roly-poly and droopy like they've got the weight of the world on their shoulders. Boy it must be tough. Coming all the way in from Pointe Claire in your SAAB to pontificate the day away.

ALBERT BERGENERGEN

I let the stack-o'-hacks go on in front of me and I make like I'm a regular Gazette staffer, all formless and puffy.

One of the puffballs wheels around and says: "The boy doesn't have a card, Security! Security."

I give the fucker a look that says, "Eat Ramen, tattle-tale Sonafabitch".

"I'm Albert Bergenergen."

"HE'S TRYING TO STEAL OUR JOBS!" one of them goes off like a siren.

Just then a 12-ton security mastadon comes running.

I make like my conscience and disappear.

I really didn't need another friendly pummeling like I got from the SQ or from the skinheads, for that matter. I run around the corner and regroup. Moses Malone, there's got to be a way in that doesn't involve getting mashed.

Just then I recognize Mordecry Richler, groping up the escalator off to get interviewed. I sally up to him like a rootin' tootin' ultra-anglo fanatic.

"Care to sign my book," I say, taking off one of my boots. Mordecry makes like he's reaching for a pen and I makes like he's a baseball and I bop him with my boot. Morty's out cold, so I liberate his duds and stuff him under a pile of newspapers on a bench. So there I am all dressed up in my Richler suit ready for another try.

There's a mop leaning against the wall so I tear off the mop part and stick it on my head. Now I'm a dead wringer for Canada's upmost man of letters. I walk up to the security desk like Irwin Gopnik on crack. The mastadon gives me a once over like a don't smell too nice.

"Listen Fartface, let me in or I write an essay on your life," I say.

The mastadon complies.

"Have a nice interview, Mr. Richler," he says, his bulbous head quaking in the moonlight. I was already thinking like Mordecry. I go into the Gazette office. It's like the Smithsonian Institute in there, except the displays are still alive. Just this then one of the puffy forms detaches itself and comes at me all slobbery and gurgly.

"Oh, Mr. Richler, Richler," the person said. "You're here for your interview."

"Oh please. Quit grovelling," I say. Gosh, darn it. I just wanted to write my column. "O.K. but make it quick."

Then I have to sit in this stuffy room with a group of identical Gazette editors mumbling and asking silly questions. Luckily, the mop hair is really starting to reek and one of the Gazette editors passes out from the smell.

Somebody yells: "I'll take his job."

But then like a miracle the guy comes to and pretends to be typing on his back on the floor.

I take advantage of the confusion to rush over to my desk and start writing: the page two column.

Just then there's a scream.

"They just found Mordecry Richter passed out on a bench outside!"

Now everyone's looking at me like, "hey, I thought that guy had funny hair."

I log off and make a face like, "hey, I was finished anyway."

I walk real slow out the door and everybody watches but nobody makes a move. On the way down the escalator, I see the real Mordecry being helped up the stairs wearing my clothes. I notice he's got my security card in his back pocket.

I jump escalators and goose him for the card.

I make my getaway.

Controversial "corn-bomb" research rocks campus

by Melissa Colgate

According to several McGill students, engineering professor John H. Lee has been secretly developing a gruesome new weapon for the Canadian and American governments.

Concern has focused on Lee's controversial research of the explosive power of corn. Under Lee's experiments, corn is ground into a fine powder, sprayed into the air, and ignited.

Several students fear Lee's research will be used to develop Corn Air Explosives (CAEs), or corn-bombs, a conventional explosive with the destructive potential of an eleven year-old boy with tooth decay.

"I am outraged that McGill can just research these really dangerous things without one iota of guilt," said chemistry student Melissa Colgate. "I find this research 100 per cent unethical and immoral."

Since 1989, funding has been channeled to Lee via three secret bank accounts and an unregistered beetroot juice company. Colgate has traced the accounts back to the Canadian Ministry of Agriculture and the Military-Industrial Complex (MIC), a lesser-known wing of the U.S. government.

Government employees defended the research, claiming it was for pure scientific inquiry. "I don't understand the big fuss," said Canadian Wheat Board CEO Jason Rorschach. "I eat corn, we eat corn. We should have no fear of corn."

But Colgate was not convinced: "Listen, first we had gunpowder, then we had nuclear weapons... If this corn bomb sees the light of day, there can be no peace on earth."

Over the past decade, controversy has encircled Lee, specifically concerning his work on Fuel Air Explosives (FAEs). FAEs have been labelled the "poor country's atomic bomb," because of their cheap price and highly-destructive capability.

The weapon spreads a vapour cloud of gasoline into the atmosphere, which is detonated. Corn-bombs, however, use ground-up corn in the place of gasoline and have been dubbed the "fireworks from Saskatchewan".

Chuck Berzowski, a graduate student working closely with Lee who requested anonymity and was refused, said that behind closed doors, Lee has demonstrated his desire to rule the earth with corn-bombs as his arsenal.

With the cheap price of corn, he said, Lee has accumulated an enormous stockpile of corn-bombs in his backyard.

"Today, Lee uses corn bombs to get more office space, tomorrow he takes over the world. This megalomaniac must be stopped," said Berzowski.

Lee would not talk to the Daily. In fact, every time Lee was approached he transformed into a black-peppered gypsy moth and flew out the window.

Semiotician's slugfest

by Riona McCain

The 10th-floor Leacock offices of the department of Semiotics were shaken by screams and dull thuds Monday as professors came to blows over the course calendar.

The fight followed a long history of conflict between a faction favouring the use of signs and another preferring symbols.

The first punch was thrown during a heated argument over whether an unpopular timeslot at 16h30 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday should be given to Barthart Eppelthorpe's course on "Signs in the Traffic of Human Discourse", or to Sebastien-Jean-Christophe-Baptiste Smith's course "The Genealogy of Vomit as Symbol".

Smith called Eppelthorpe a "wind-bag reactionary." Eppelthorpe responded that Smith's course is "little but a load of trendy post-modern tripe."

Smith then gave Eppelthorpe a quick left to the jaw.

"Think of what this signifies!" said Harley Spokes, a signs partisan.

"What it signifies to you has nothing to do with what it signifies for me," said professor Égret Reimosse-Teilant (symbols). "For example, among the Talom-ebong of central Cikasno, a black eye symbolizes wealth and the desire to attract a beloved one."

"Fucking idealists," screamed Barthart Oopstik, a stray phenomenologist from the ninth floor who happened to be walking by.

"A black eye is pain and suffering! It's not an abstract unit of perception in a disconnected and random collection of..."

"Sound and fury, signifying nothing," interrupted department chair Pompass Wevilsnute, a hard-line sign man.

"Kuck mal; sein auge ist echt ganz blutig und blau," observed professor Albert Muenscher (a symbol man aligned with the sign faction).

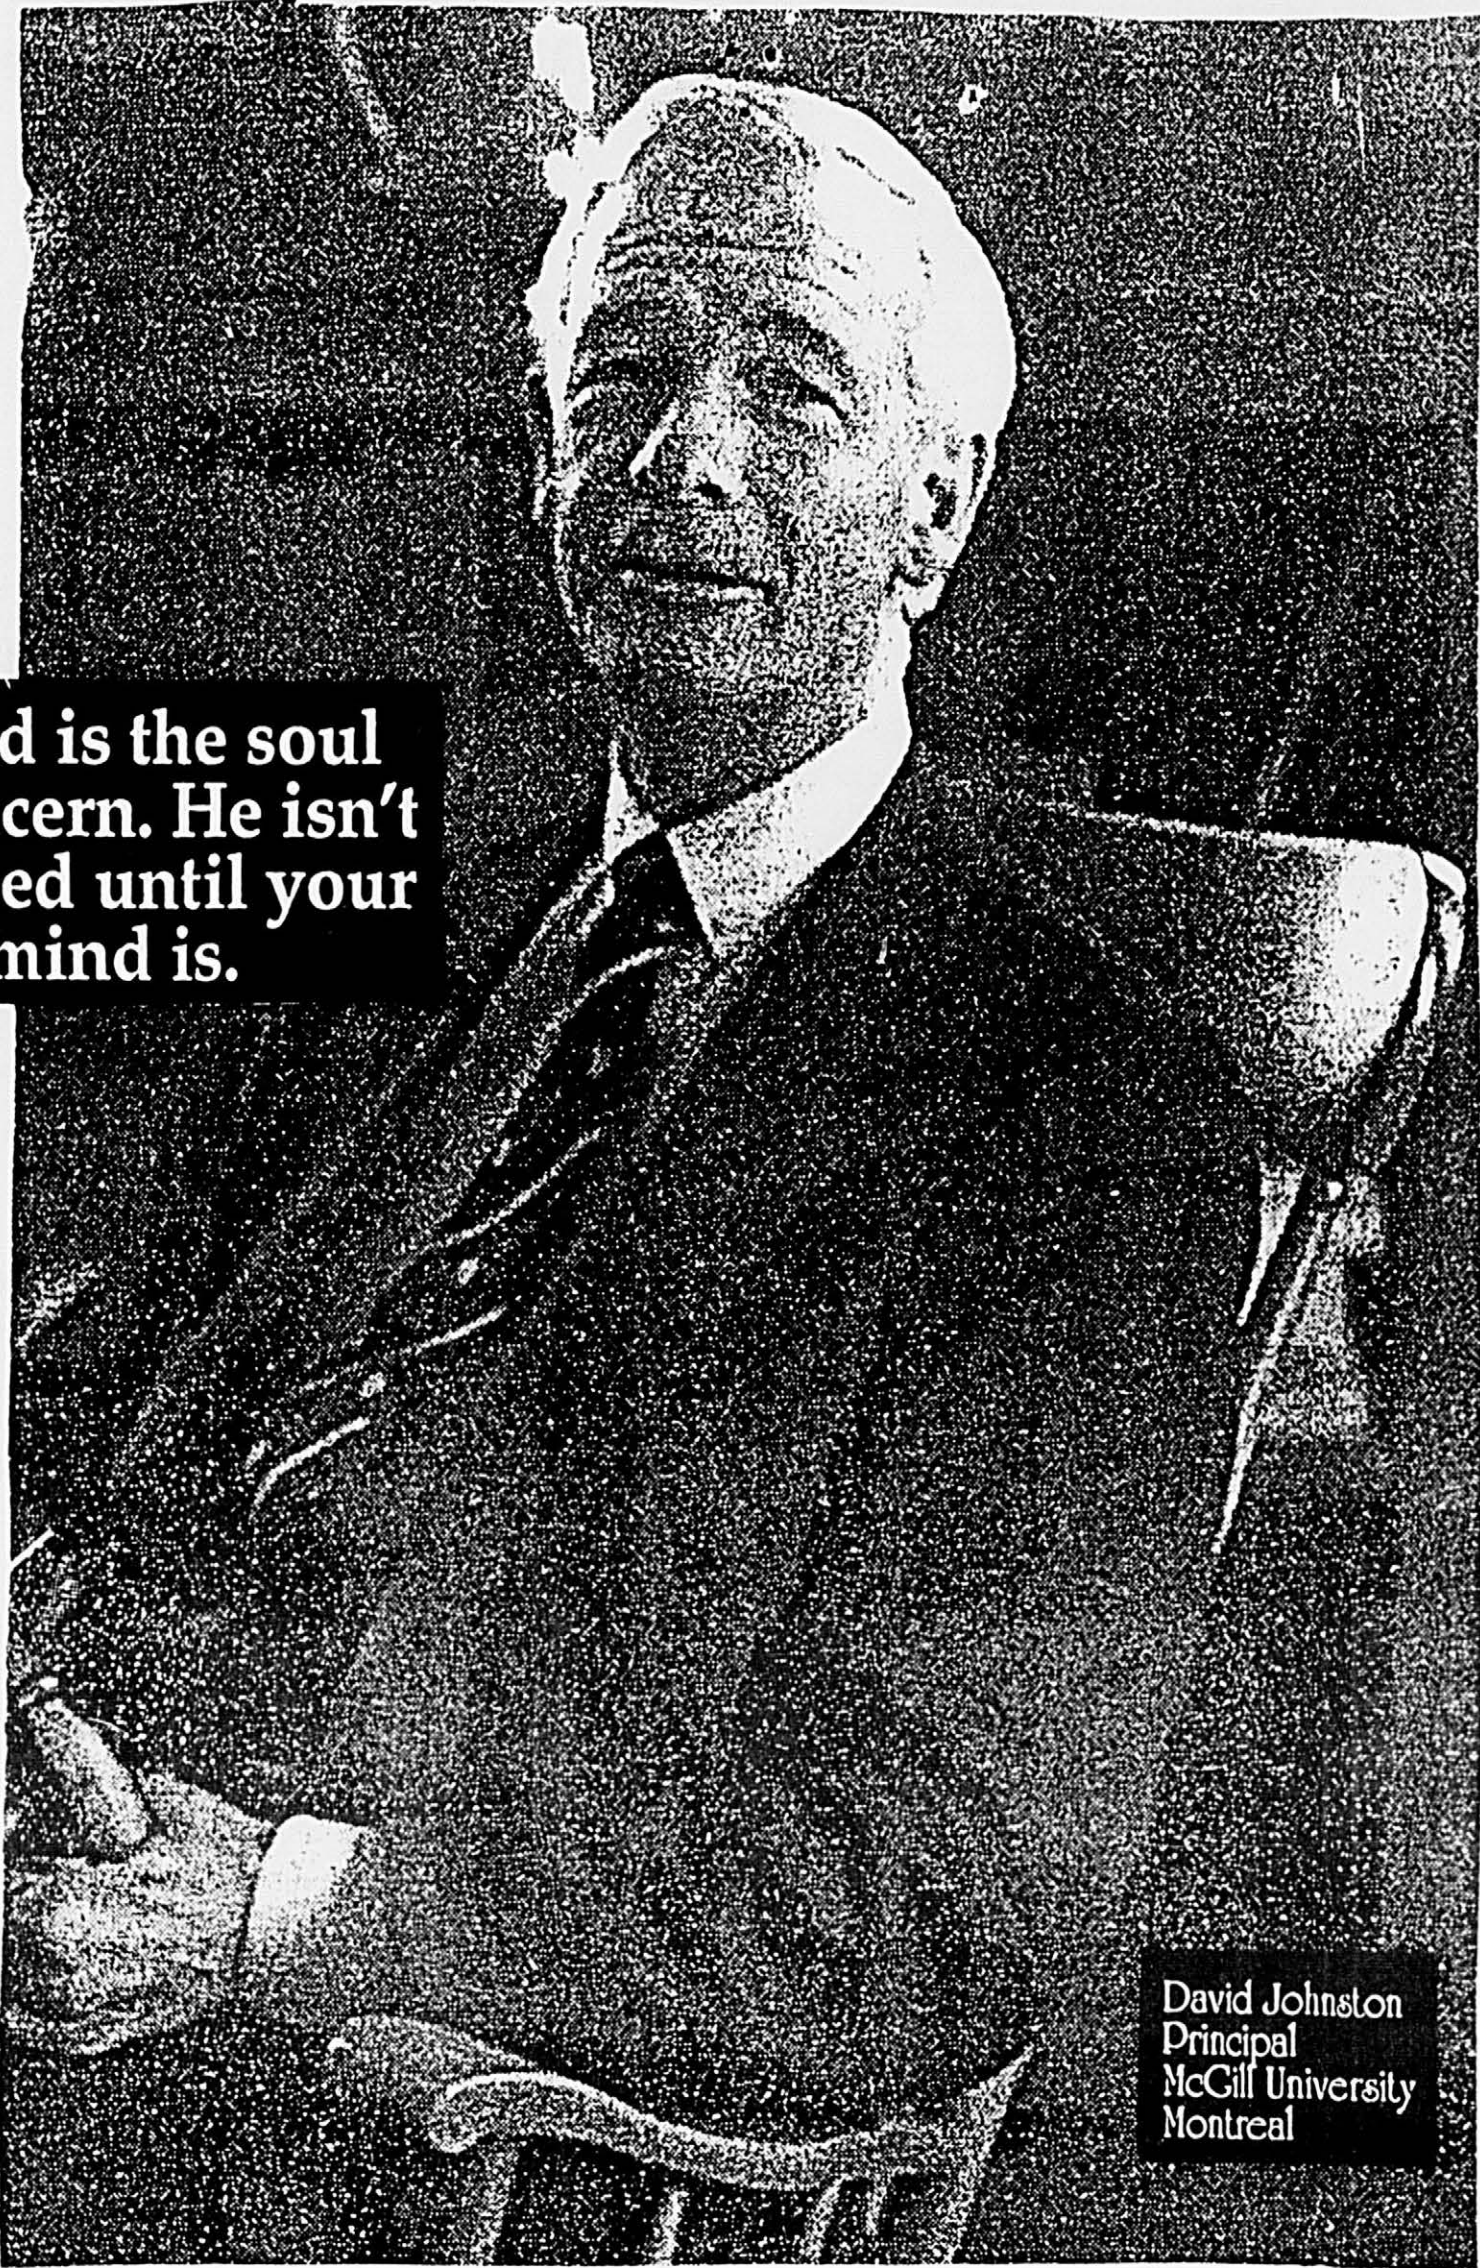

Muescher's sage observation went without a response as Reimosse-Teilant threw a chair at the Chair. The Chair threw the chair back and then hid under (what most department members term) the table.

Then the symbol faction went on the attack. Smith with his fists, professor Edith Mayberry-Swift with a spike heeled shoe, Reimosse-Teilant continued to attack the Chair with a chair, and assistant professor Roger Rigelworthy ran around hitting people over the head with a big volume of Barthes.

Professors from the sign faction were quick to respond. Eppelthorpe ran up to Smith and kicked him in the shins. And so it went, with assistant professor Wevilsnute standing all the time on a table issuing volleys of sarcasm at the horde.

Eventually McGill's security brigades broke up the fight and locked everyone in their offices until they calmed down.

Dean of arts Huan Valdez denied all rumours that the university plans to close the department, and turn it into a giant quiche. "No-one has suggested anything of the kind. Who leake... told you? Where did you hear this?"

FUCKers funded by the Godfather

by a very biased journalist

Allegations have been leveled against leaders of Québec's largest student federation of receiving kick-backs from organized crime.

Nuclear Pffflourde, president of the Federation of University and Corporate Knuckleheads (FUCK), defended himself from charges that he and other members of the FUCK executive were receiving money from criminal elements.

When asked by Daily reporter Miles Blum why he held a secret Swiss Bank account and why he had recently purchased a one-way ticket to Venezuela, Pffflourde confirmed that he did not deny the allegations.

Reliable sources, who look a lot like PGSS execs, told Blum that the links between FUCK and the mafia were "unquestionable."

Later Pffflourde claimed the whole story was a result of misinformation and a conspiracy to defame him.

"It's all a misinformation campaign by the Daily. They're all so biased and politically correct," said Nuckie. "They're so unobjective they can't see that its all right to accept extortion money...er, I mean, government bursaries."

The Daily frequently publishes headlines such as: 'THOSE STUPID GODDAM FUCKERS,' 'KILL THEM ALL' and 'FUCK, a gang of fartcatchers?'

Alex Roslin, dictator-in-chief of the Daily, claimed the headlines in question were not biased.

"Of course they're not biased. I mean, look at the dogma back in the 60's. They thought it was all right," said Roslin.

Pffflourde said he was irritated by Students' Society's withdrawal from FUCK, and said it aggravated his already-aggravated hypertension. "I'm hurtin', I'm really hurtin'," he said.

He said the democratic process at McGill was run by a bunch of council-sissies, and Students' Society executives need a firm hand to keep dissenters at bay. He suggested Students' Society could borrow FUCK's tanks and troops, on loan from the SQ and paid for by government bursaries.

"One swift swoop and (vp external) Kurly (McDonald's) could eliminate all opposition," he ranted.

McDonald's herself was in favour of the idea, claiming the virtues of FUCK outweighed any loyalty to the democratic process.

"I say stay the FUCK in or get blown the FUCK up," said McDonald's. "I mean, thanks to FUCK's intimacy with the government, we were able to get tuition fees indexed to the rate of inflation (in Brazil)."

Karla said she had gone to the judicial board for a 37th recount of the FUCK ballots and to get permission to use armed force. Chief Returning Officer William Stool said the judicial board had authorised the carpet bombing of the McGill Daily offices, provided the Daily would still have to pay its $14 000 in rent.

AFTER NEARLY A DECADE AS THIS COUNTRY'S (CANADA'S) PM, LITTLE HAS BEEN REVEALED OF BRIAN MULRONEY'S YOUTHFUL DAYS BESIDES TRIVIA AND RUMOUR. THE DAILY HAS RECENTLY UNEARTHED PHOTOS DISPLAYING MULRONEY'S "YOUTHFUL INDISCRETIONS" AS A NAZI BIKER AND DRUG KINGPIN. EAT YOUR HEART OUT, FRANK.

Principal's true colours shine through

by Miguel Day-Lee

Principal David Johnston renewed his attack on progressive student organizations on campus yesterday, saying they were "soft on fascism" and "a gang of hippy-dippy liberals".

Johnston rushed between various club offices in the Union Building all day yesterday brandishing a Molotov cocktail and a four foot sabre, urging students to "cast off your chains".

"You have a world to gain," he repeatedly said.

In an interview with the Daily, Johnston complained that the Left in Canada is in disarray, and suggested that anarchists and other leftists must unite to combat U.S. imperialism and what he described as "the rise of fascism".

"Do you really think you're going to change a single fucking thing in this world by just writing articles in your puny newspaper?" Johnston asked one Daily reporter.

Johnston also chastised the reporter for "smoking tobacco picked by impoverished Mexican workers", and for being reluctant to toss a petrol bomb into the offices of the Students' Society, whom he accused of being "traitors to the student body".

He said the Students' Society executive has ensured anything radical and revolutionary has been shut out of the democratic process. He said that his daughter, VP Internal Alex Johnston, has been a disgrace to the family because of her collaboration with the "establishment".

"Don't you realize that you've duped all along by those moron lackeys," Johnston told the 50-or-so students gathered around him. "This is your one chance to get rid of those five deadwood executives."

Johnston was later seen in the offices of the McGill staff association MUNASA, ferociously attacking it for being "a company union" and "for betraying the workers of McGill".

Johnston was eventually detained by campus security after urinating on the Arts Building steps and threatening a member of the Fukka Mango fraternity with a knife.

One witness reported that as Johnston was forcefully led to a police van, he repeatedly yelled into the faces of the McGill-employed security guards: "Hang your boss! Hang your boss!"

Scott's to take over known universe

by Curly Fries

Scott's Foods has announced plans to take over the entire known universe.

The plans were made public last night by Lev Bukhman, the new president of Scott's, the evil capitalist megacorp which owns Kentucky Fried Chicken and Manchu Wok, and has a monopoly on food services at McGill.

"It was part of our original plans, anyway," said Bukhman, who resigned from his position as Students' Society vp finance when offered the presidency by Scott's.

"This is just one more step in our reactionary corporate hegemonisation, with which we hope to stamp down on the oppressed and stand in the way of global socialism," he added.

But McGill chancellor Greta Chambers denied that Scott's intentions are so noble.

"They have not formed a revolutionary party. They have not mobilised support from the working masses for their cause. Their bourgeois hooliganism is well-known," she said.

"They are merely evidence that there continue to be counter-revolutionary influences at McGill, which we must vigilantly ferret out."

The Federation of University and Corporate Knuckleheads (FUCK) has already come out in favour of the new plans.

"It shows immense progress," said Karla MacDonald, FUCK's VP Happy.

"How can we work together for world peace and joy if we are not under the thumb of a single despotic ruler?" she said.

FUCK has long argued the benefits of total pan-galactic dictatorship.

According to Bukhman, the invasion of the known universe will start Tuesday.

"We're using the McGill campus as a base," he said. "From here, first we're going to move out across Montréal and Canada."

"Today McGill, tomorrow the world!" he said.

The attack strategy, as unveiled at a special press conference in the Studsoc cocktail lounge, will first target large urban centres on major planets circling class-M stars.

From there, Scott's plans to move on to more rural areas.

"The attack is very well organised," said MacDonald. "There is no reason for it to fail."

THE MCGILL STALELY

CONTEMPT

We finely spit it out

You stupid fucking cretins, you call yourselves university students? Members of the intelligensia, the upper class, the educated elite, future of the world, aspiring entrepreneurs! We say piss off to all of you.

The snivelling worthless cow-blowers that inhabit this school, death to the lot of you. You all don't care, you're all a bunch of apathetic spineless corporate wanna-bees with heads of brass. Just look in the mirror one day. Don't you realise your own uselessness?

You're worried about deficit reduction, are you? No problem: close down the Faculty of Arts. Redundant philosophers, sociologists, economists and all other wimpy artholes, get rid of the whole breed!

Better yet, close the whole university down, turn it back into a farm. Montréal could use the green space. And we could all go take our shits in the fields and cut down on harmful pesticides.

Besides, no-mind dean of students Irksome Groping seems much more adapted to herding sheep than students. Principal Dave would do much better milking cows than milking for grants from some crazed Multinational Corporation.

Face it, it's all over. Nobody gives a shit anymore, it's useless to continue anymore. We wish we were dead.

READER'S DIARRHOEA...

Not in official capacity

To the Daily:

I am responding to your article of March 22 entitled "Police raid ends PoliSci s+m Fest". First off, contrary to your report, I did not "perish in the maelstrom", as was falsely reported. I am still quite healthy and doctors report that I will be walking within the week.

As for the alleged "police raid", while it is true that several of Montréal's finest did attend the soirée, it was not in an official capacity. They merely felt their uniforms would lend them more legitimacy as 'tops'.

Also, it should be noted that the S+M Fest was not merely a one-shot deal, as was averred by the Daily. In the spirit of the McGill political science department, an evening of sado-masochistic sex will become an annual departmental event, supplemented by a new hands-on seminar directed by professors Booth and Brynen.

Lots of support

To the Daily:

The Daily's recent "feature" which made grave allegations of fraud against Santa Claus ("Dreaming of a greenback Christmas") was yet another example of your lack of objectivity. The bad publicity has already affected sales of Santa Products Ltd and threatens jobs during a recession.

Your claim that Mr Claus "promised little children bundles of toys on several occasions yet did not deliver" is patently false, as the Daily would know if your reporter bothered to read the many letters of support our firm has received from children over the years.

Mr Claus is also deeply insulted by the accusation that he is a "Christian cultural phenomenon forced down the throats of non-Christians the world over for far too long," as claimed by "Santa expert" Rudolph Rednose.

It should be noted that Mr Rednose is far from being an unbiased source. Rednose, who worked for Mr Claus as a personal chauffeur, is presently engaged in a legal action against our firm for wrongful dismissal, even though he was caught abusing alcohol on the job.

If the Daily really wanted to print an investigative story about Santa Products, your reporter should have interviewed a few of the small business owners who make their living merchandizing our goods.

Get hip

To the Daily:

Wut's up, dudes? Normally I'm a big fan of youze guys. But I don't get why you're making fun of me so much in your recent issues. I mean, I'm hip to the plan. I know where it's at, dig? I just don't get it, guys.

Like maybe we should go out for a toke some time, and shoot the shit. We should get to know each other a bit better so we can get along in the future, okay dudes? I always said you never really know somebody until you toked them up. Have you ever heard of this band Planet Gong? WOW. They're totally out of it! Why don't you come over and we can make a tape. Catch ya later!

David "Moonbeam" Johnston
Principal

Ed note: We would like to advise the principal that "toking up" is against Canadian federal law — and common sense. Use of marijuana always leads to abuse, which leads to the abuse of what experts call harder drugs — cocaine, "acid", ecstasy and even crack. We strongly urge principal Johnston to set a moral example for McGill students and to seek professional help. For counselling, call McGill Chaplaincy at 398-4104.

...WHICH WE DON'T READ

Up yer ass, darkly

To the Daily:

I was just experimenting in our newly remodeled kitchen the other day, when by chance I created the most delightful dish.

Try this at home: Take your regular breakfast ox and fry it until you can stick a pitchfork all the way in without any gore getting on it. Place the beast on a bed of leeks and slowly pour your choice of table d'hôte on top. Serve with maincotti and a fresh squid salad.

You can make a subtle topping for the ox by crumbling old copies of the Daily (pre-1966) in your palm and placing it in a bowl on the breakfast table so your guests can sprinkle as much as they want on top of the meal (it's got a real kick to it).

Enjoy, my children!

Um, you know, lots of them...

—opinion of Kellee, of the Students for a Groping Free McGill (SGFM)

There is a problem at McGill. Irksome Groping is a petty, lying, vicious weeny. He is overlord of student services at McGill and has alienated every student he has encountered, even me, and I'm really great.

The more students protest Groping's obstructionism, the more this guy obstructs. But don't take my word for it.

As my alter-ego once said: "There are serious problems at McGill... um, well you know, lots of them — all of which affect women, exclusively not particularly."

"He may have herbal tea in his office, but I'm certain he doesn't," I added.

Not only does he claim to be insensitive to student desires, he is bad company.

"He may have desired my desirous, but he is just a bore," disgruntled former lover grad society official Michelle "della Camora" Spaghetтини once told me.

Well McGill, the time has come to act. Let us not be intimidated. Let us intimidate.

What is needed is links between the desirous and the desired, community-based matriarchy, and revitalization of the labours of love. Letters of protest — however fortuitously leaked — have amounted to nothing.

Students for a Groping-Free McGill is a fresh group dedicated to dislodging this lacklustre dean by any means necessary. Especially mindless terrorism. We need your support.

Watch out. Watch out for announcements of our meetings and events starting this week. Buy your Molotovs now, while supplies last. At the InfoKiosk, by god.

Menstrual art newest fad at Menses gallery

by Jessica Lightdays & Erica Maxipad

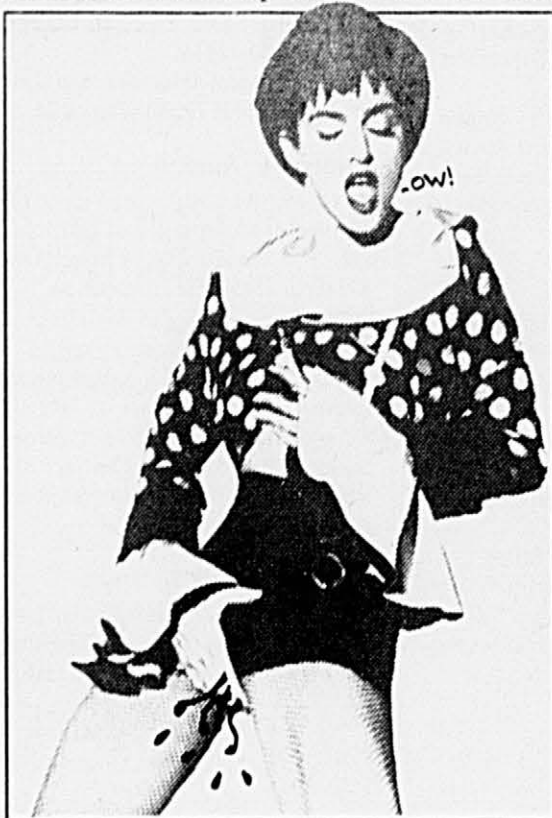

Gallery Menses has recently opened up on St. Denis. A wide selection of menstrual art for every taste is on display. The gallery also specializes in interactive art, encouraging women to participate in the creative process.

"What a celebration of the fact that women bleed," said a gallery goer. "This has been a very fulfilling, holistic experience."

The gallery is very proud of one of its prize works, a used tampon of Madonna's, found in a Beverly Hills hotel washroom by National Inquirer reporter Toni Nawshus. The tampon has been encased under glass at the front entrance of the gallery. The piece is accompanied by a series of photos, documenting the process of discolouration and breakdown of the tampon.

Also of interest are a graphic series of vulvicsculptures. These Gallery Menses invites all women to participate in the creation of a wall piece entitled "Menstrual Blood and the Urban Crisis." Women are asked to reach in their crotch and share a smear.

The Gallery's opening was marred by the presence of protesters from Puritanical Righteous Urban Dames for Ethics (PRUDE). They came with buckets of water and bleach to erase any spontaneous creations.

"Sure I menstruate," said Agnes Withwings, a member of PRUDE. "But I don't go around taping my Always™ to the walls."

"It's just disgusting," said a member of REAL Women. "I suggest Molotov bombing."

But the protest did not stop the joyful events inside. Blood was merrily splashed against the walls.

"I think women's blood is beautiful," said a typical sensitive man.

The gallery owners hope their recent endeavour will rid people of their fears of menstrual blood.

"After bleeding on the earth every weekend, we decided to get together to make a more permanent statement," said Moonbeam Pureblood, a gallery worker.

Gallery Menses is funded by EnviroArt and Kotex™.

Gallery Menses is open all hours since the menstrual tributaries never run dry.

Revolving lights have secret purpose

by Simon Lune

Early this morning, Montréal party goers witnessed a startling sight. They reported seeing flashing lights and strange looking flying objects in the sky around the Place Ville Marie office tower.

According to Hagbard Coin, off-world visitors use the revolving light atop the office tower as a landing beacon.

"Most people in my line of business already know what the lights are really for," said the notorious jet-set party thrower and investigator of the bizarre.

Coin claimed the visitors were not entirely unexpected.

"My friends and I wanted to have a big Cybernaut party, so it was appropriate that we chose Montréal. It already has a landing beacon," said Coin.

Other party goers confirmed the reports. "Yeah, they brought all these wicked drugs," said Kerry Ohn.

Workers at the building were surprised to hear of the ulterior purpose for the lights.

"I always thought it was for airplanes," said Guy Chateaubriand, a janitor in the building. "Sort of like, hello, there's a city here."

Much speculation has surrounded the familiar lights.

Richard Fersher, of the Bureau for Unexplained Revolving Phenomena (BURP), confirms that the most popular theory is that the lights are for aircraft.

"Many people don't even realize that there are in fact four lights revolving up there," said Fersher. "Which would make them excellent for aircraft navigation purposes."

But, documents obtained by the Daily reveal that as early as 1979 the Surété du Québec (SQ) have taken an interest in the revolving lights.

"They did their investigation but no one will admit where the lights came from or what they are really for," said Fersher. "The SQ have been covering this up for a long time."

Apparently the SQ was trying to keep the whole thing under wraps until it could be determined just who was spying on whom.

Coin was very candid about the whole thing. "I can't believe Montréalers didn't know about this. That beacon is known throughout the Spiral Arm."

According to Coin offworld visitors have been coming to taste the Montréal night life for years.

"Where do you think they would go, Toronto? Do you have any idea how early the bars close there?"

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Mulroney pissed about affair

A drunken Prime Minister Brian Mulroney charged through the McGill campus last night with a gun, threatening to "do some damage" to semi-evil dean of students Irksome Groping.

The chin that walks like a man was reacting to speculation that Groping had an affair with Mila Muldoon.

Mulroonoo eventually found dean Groping hiding in a toilet and shot him six times in the head. Police later subdued Mulroney with some gum and escorted him to a Westmount detox centre.

Groping was given a facial massage at a local hospital and released.

Thanks a bunch, Amex

"We wuv you, American Express!"

That was the message delivered to the giant American Express credit card conglomerate at last night's General Assembly of undergraduate students.

The Assembly, called last week by outgoing Students' Society vp-internal Alex Johnston, was an opportunity for students to express their gratitude to American Express.

Students milled around for hours afterward, praying to Jesus Christ and singing songs extolling the company.

"Sweet Lord, how holy you are to bring us such beautiful corporate involvement on campus," said Braddock Aryanpenny, head of comissars at the Management Students' Society and defense minister of Fukka Mango fraternity.

American Express purchased McGill's economics department last year for $1.

Said Johnston, who is leaving McGill this year for a job at American Express in the company's biological weapons program: "They (AmEx) bring good things to life."

Four months

A four-month-long Daily investigation has revealed nothing.

In another development, a Daily poll has revealed that the Daily investigation is highly revealing.

Beer on Gopnik

McGill agreed to put port in campus drinking fountains after students elected a pro-port president to Students' Society last week.

Nick Auf der Maur, who returned to McGill as a special student after two decades in city politics, overwhelmingly defeated Arts student Pierre E. Trudeau, another politician.

Auf der Maur ridiculed Trudeau yesterday for his campaign pledge to put beer in the drinking fountains, and called him a "vulgarian".

McGill accountants worked out the port plan over the weekend, and announced details yesterday. At a cost of $42 million for initial construction and an additional $12 million a year for port supplies, the plan calls for gradual introduction of a delicate but sturdy Turkish vintage from 1932 in fountains throughout the university.

Funds will be raised by a voluntary pay cut taken by dean of students Irwin Gopnik, a key administration supporter of the plan.

SSMU BRIEFS

A New Drug Plan

Vp finance lev Buhkman announced plans to create a new non-prescription drug plan to serve as a companion to this year's prescription drug plan.

"If a student gets addicted to narcotics, we don't want them to have to go bankrupt paying for them. This will serve as a safety net for students," said Buhkman.

Some councillors questioned the plan. "Doesn't this just mean one more of those annoying opt-out forms," said Clubs rep Julie Dzerowicz.

Architecture rep Dave Gruber added, "Students are being charged for being apathetic and not using drugs."

Buckmann quickly responded. "If students bring a signed affidavit with three witnesses that their parents pay for their illegal drugs to the Students' Society desk between 2h00 and 2h30 on Christmas Day, and can pass a polygraph test, they're out. It's that simple."

Students will be asked to approve the plan at a special referendum in July.

FMC talks about S&MMU

SSMU's FMC (formerly the JMC) announced at last night's Council meeting that it would cost $10 000 000 to create the proposed SSMUES.

"I don't think we should spend $10 million on SSMUES when we have to charge CKUT-FM and the DPS rent," said Architecture rep Dave Gruber.

But VPs on the EC shot back. "SSMU needs SSMUES because of the new LOFA," said Maximum Leader Scott's Mitic. "BoG is making us do it."

"It says clearly on D-73 that AGEUQAM, FAECUM and CUSA all have something like SSMUES," added Mitic.

At the center of this issue a debate between MUNASA and SSMU over the old LOFA and last year's EC firing Don McGerrigle.

MACES, PGSS, and EUS are already incorporated. PGSS is using their status up at TH to improve the conditions of their TA's

"We've discussed this with MUNASA, EUS, ASUS, MUS, EdUS, and AUS and FUCK and they all support it," said vp internal Al Johnstone.

FUCK, formerly FEUQ and FEEQ, is a member of MEEQ and IUS, is affiliated with FECQ, and organized the CEREO.
